Care & cost authorization

If my gecko needs urgent care and I cannot be reached, I authorize my sitter to seek veterinary treatment. I agree to cover costs up to the amount below and will reimburse the sitter promptly for any approved expenses.

Spending limit without calling us: $ _____ Pet insurance / policy # _____

Signature _____ Date _____

Sprout's tip

Snap a photo of this page and your vet records to your sitter before you leave — paper is cozy, but backups are cozier.

Sitter visits

Visits per day: _____ Ideal visit times: _____

Minimum visit length that keeps me happy: _____ minutes

Feeding Me

I'm 100% insectivore — no fruits or veggies needed!

Insect feedings

Date/day	Insect type	How many	Dusted?

Feeding days (every 2-3 days for adults) _____ Insects live / are stored _____

Calcium powder — dust every feeding, brand & location _____

Water & extras

Water dish located _____ Water changed how often _____

Favorite feeder insects (crickets, dubia, mealworms...) _____

My food allergies / sensitivities _____

Prey size — no wider than the space between my eyes! _____

Very important

Never feed me fireflies — even half of one can be fatal to a gecko. Also skip wild-caught insects (pesticides) and anything wider than my head — it's an impaction and choking risk.

Tank & Temperature

The right heat gradient is life or death for me

Warm side temp (target 88-92°F) _____ Cool side temp (target 75-80°F) _____

Heat source (under-tank heater, etc.) _____

Thermostat/thermometer located _____

Humidity level & humid hide location (needed for shedding!) _____

UVB bulb schedule (if used) & other hides (warm + cool) _____

Please check the thermostat at every visit

— as a cold-blooded reptile, I can't regulate my own body heat at all.

What normal looks like for me

Usual activity level (roughly) _____

Call my humans if you see

- ♥ Sunken eyes or loose, wrinkled skin (dehydration)
- ♥ Not eating for over a week, or a thin/dark tail (fat store depleted)
- ♥ Stuck shed, especially around toes or tail tip
- ♥ Open-mouth breathing, lethargy, or glass surfing (pacing/scratching the glass)

Sprout's tip

My tail stores fat and should look plump, not thin! A skinny or oddly-colored tail is one of the easiest early warning signs that something's off with me.

Medications & Health

If I need a little extra care

My medications

Medication	Dose	When	How to give it to me

Meds are stored _____ Pill pockets / tricks that work _____

Health notes

Ongoing conditions _____

Allergies (food, meds, environment) _____

Past issues worth knowing about _____

What's normal for me

Circle what applies: I lick my eyes (normal!) · I chirp · I've dropped my tail before

Other totally-normal-for-me things _____

Handle with Love

My personality user manual

I love

Favorite basking spots & warm places _____

Enrichment I love (climbing branches, hides...) _____

Things that make me feel calm and settled _____

Please avoid

Bright light or handling during the day (I'm nocturnal!) _____

Things that stress me (loud noise, sudden movement...) _____

Reading my signals

A waving or vibrating tail means I'm alert or annoyed — best to give me some space.

Happy/calm me looks like _____

Overstimulated me looks like (please give space) _____

Handling me safely

NEVER grab or hold me by my tail — I can drop it as a defense, and it hurts me!

Scoop me gently from underneath instead, supporting my whole body.

How long I tolerate handling before I get antsy (often just minutes!) _____

House Notes

Keeping my corner cozy

Tank location & comfort

Tank location (away from direct sun & drafts — heat spikes fast!) _____

Room stays reasonably stable — the tank does the rest _____

Backup plan if power/heat source ever goes out _____

Home care while away

Plants to water _____

Mail & packages _____

Lights / blinds _____

Thermostat setting _____

Trash & recycling day _____

Supplies map

Extra feeder insects & calcium powder _____

Cleaning supplies (substrate, wipes) _____

Spare heat bulb / mat _____

Thermometer & hygrometer _____

Thank You for ♥ Taking Care of Me! ♥

My humans and I are so grateful. Help yourself to snacks in the kitchen, and please accept payment in gentle blinks and the occasional tail wave.

With scales & tail waves,

(my signature — a little footprint, if you can catch me)
